

INTEGRATING RACE AND CULTURE IN EVIDENCE-BASED TREATMENTS

Integrating race and culture in evidence-based treatments should be at the center of our work. The recent racial uprising has thrust the importance of discussing the impact of racism on everyone's lives. This webinar will focus on how to consider race and culture at the center of your work and will begin with a brief overview of evidence-based strategies that are effective for use with historically marginalized populations. Panelists of providers with both lived experiences personally and professionally join us in this webinar to share their expertise with us in this webinar.

January 21, 2021
12-1pm PST

Register here: <https://tinyurl.com/racecultureebps>

WON-FONG LAU JOHNSON, PHD

Dr. Won-Fong Lau Johnson is a Licensed Clinical Psychologist and Nationally Certified School Psychologist. She is currently the Assistant Director of Service Systems at the UCLA-Duke National Center for Child Traumatic Stress. She has been involved with the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences for the past four years, where she engaged in research, policy development, and training efforts focused on adapting the use of EBP's for historically marginalized populations.

Featuring panelists:

Laura Escalona-Flores, MSW, LICSW
School Based Mental Health Manager
Neighborcare Health

Seema Mhatre, LICSW, MPH
Licensed Clinical Social Worker
Odessa Brown Clinic Seattle Children's Hospital

Rickey "Deekon" Jones
Founder and CEO of New Developed Nations