Free Chickens 101 Seminars in Jay, NY

Jay, NY. – Ward Lumber is hosting two free Chickens 101 Seminars at their Jay, NY location. One will focus on layers and the other on meat birds. The seminars will be on Tuesday, March 9th at 6:00 pm for Laying Birds 101 and Thursday, March 21st at 6:00pm for Meat Birds 101. The goal of the workshops are to provide all the info for attendees to start raising their own layers and or meat birds this year.

Chickens 101 will cover all aspects of raising meat chickens and layers from set up to getting ready to harvest meat birds and collect the eggs from laying hens. Topics include: breed selection for success; brooding do's and don'ts; feeding & watering equipment; proper nutrition for good health; housing options for pastured poultry; chicken harvest made easy; prep for harvest to reduce stress on everyone involved.

Jay Ward is the presenter. Jay has raised various types of livestock on and off since age 8 and is currently raising chickens (meat and replacement pullets), pigs and alpacas. Jay has trained with skilled poultry slaughterers and many chicken farmers sharing the best practices and techniques for chicken harvesting. He assembled and field tested a suite of portable poultry processing equipment to enable farmers to more easily harvest their own chickens on their farms.
