Please or Thank You? How to survive December

I recently had one of those days. You know, you can't really put your finger on it, but you just feel emotionally and physically exhausted by the end of it. It's getting colder and darker, and daily life is looking more like a slog. As I do every night, I took the dog for a walk in the church cemetery. There's a spot I aim for in the corner by the creek, and there I stopped and admitted to God, "I am having a hard time right now." No sooner had I said that then I felt a tug at the leash, at the end of which the dog was rolling on his back in the dirt. I responded with all the dog-owner-telling-the-dog-to-stop clichés I could think of, and he jumped up to his feet, shook off, wagged his tail, and (if dogs could do it) smiled. At first I was annoyed and jealous (all he does is sleep all day, then the first chance he gets rolls in a pile of dirt). Then it hit me: roll in the dirt.

I could pray that God would please take away the things that burdened me. But if I were to pray for that, I would have nothing and do nothing—no job, no family, no purpose for being. Sure, of all the paper cuts that make up the thousand that kill, a few could always go; but mostly they are necessary parts of my life. I have so much to lose because I have been given so much. I have so much to complain about because I have been blessed so much. I can look with disgust at the dirt on my hands and try to wash them clean, but even the stupid dog knows better: it is easier and happier to give thanks for the dirt.

So I did. I started thanking God. I started at home, and thanked God for my family—each of them, by name, with a pause between each name as I pictured them in my mind. Then I thanked God for our school's teachers—each of them, by name, with a pause between each name as I pictured them in my mind. Then the support staff of the school—each of them, by name, with a pause between each name as I pictured them in my mind. Then I moved on to the church: the elders, the school board, board of business management, youth board, stewardship, evangelism, trustees, council, planning committee, building committee, musicians, screen operators, greeters, ushers, janitors. You know the drill—each of them, by name, with a pause between each name as I pictured them in my mind. I simply said, “Thank you for X,” for literally everyone I could think of who has anything to do with my regular life. As I turned to go home, I topped off my list with that which we all should be most thankful in December: the incarnation of Jesus Christ, who takes away the sin of the world.

It was not magic—it’s not like I suddenly felt eternally grateful and danced a jig of happiness. I was still tired, just not despairing. I gave thanks in the way you force yourself to exercise, and it was exercise in that it was good for me, and it turned the weariness into endurance. Instead of being frustrated at someone at home or work who failed to meet my expectations, I can give thanks for them. Instead of being defensive over someone’s criticism of me, I can give thanks for them. Instead of complaining about the amount of work I have in the next couple weeks, I can give thanks for it. Instead of bemoaning the number of gifts and parties to get and go to, I can give thanks that I have so many people to give to and celebrate with.

It is incidental that my entire list of people has something to do with church (go figure, I’m a pastor). You can make your own list. Try it and let me know how it goes. As you pause and thank God for each one of them, you may find that your mood changes from despair to contentment, from bitterness to apathy, from seeing people as annoyances to seeing them as people for whom Christ was born, died, rose, and ascended. Then maybe you will worry more about being the kind of person for whom others give thanks.

LEAP – The Lutheran Education Advancement Plan in Michigan’s Great Lake Bay Region

LEAP is pleased to introduce to you the “brand new” LEAP Admissions Coordinator, Mrs. Carol Sweebe, to serve some of the schools of LEAP. Carol is a member of St. John’s Lutheran Church in Midland, and she has two children who are graduates of that school. She has been a very active member and leader within her church and school. She is the Founder and Executive Director of “Ministries of Hope,” a not-for-profit organization which helps couples and individuals live as children of God. Mrs. Sweebe is pleased to report that “I am very excited to be working with Lutheran schools in the Great Lakes Bay Region, as I believe they provide a much-needed opportunity for parents who choose to give their children an education that is academically sound and Biblically based. Our children were blessed to experience that gift and are strong in their faith and in life as a result of it.”

More news concerning the School Admissions Coordinator and her work will be following in days to come. Stay tuned. And please continue to pray God’s blessings upon the children and families and ministries of our Lutheran schools!

Persecuted Church

The article which follows appeared in an email from Blaze. I am providing it in its entirety so that copyright is not infringed. National Day of Prayer for the Persecuted Church occurs in early November of each year. The statistics are a grim reminder that our brothers and sisters in chains world-wide truly need our supplication in prayer daily. Daily, because they are being persecuted daily, and daily, they must live day to day. Christ goes with them through it all and asks us to remember them as if we ourselves were in chains with them.

It is for them as it was for Paul as he noted in 2 Timothy 2: 8-10. "...This is my gospel, for which I am suffering even to the point of being chained like a criminal. But God's word is not chained. ..."

Too Many To Count: The Global Persecution Of Christians

by Tyler Durden

Mon, 11/11/2019 - 02:00

Authored by Raymond Ibrahim via The Gatestone Institute,

Today is one of the International Days of Prayer for the Persecuted Church (IDOP). Initiated over 20 years ago by the World Evangelical Alliance, 100,000 congregations around the world and millions of Christians participate on this day.

"This November let us unite in prayer for our persecuted brothers and sisters," IDOP noted in a brief video that highlights a few examples of recent persecution, including the Easter Sunday church bombings in Sri Lanka and the ongoing slaughter of Christians by Islamic groups in Nigeria and, increasingly, Burkina Faso.

Discussing this day's significance, Vernon Brewer, the CEO and founder of World Help, a Christian humanitarian organization, wrote:

"It's easy to go about our lives and forget that in places like Nigeria, Iran and North Korea being a Christian can often lead to death. After all, for the most part, persecution for our faith isn't something most of us face... But I can't forget the believers I've met in Iraq, China or at the North Korean border. I can't forget their scars or their haunted eyes and horrific stories... The more I travel, the more I see that in many countries Christian persecution is worse than ever before.

Statistics bear out this grim assertion: "4,136 Christians were killed for faith-related reasons," noted Open Doors in its World Watch List 2019. "On average, that's 11 Christians killed every day for their faith." Additionally, "2,625 Christians were detained without trial, arrested, sentenced and imprisoned" and "1,266 churches or Christian buildings were attacked."

The report further states that more than 245 million Christians around the world are currently suffering from persecution. In other words, "1 in 9 Christians experience high levels of persecution worldwide."

Typically women fare worse: "In many places, they experience a 'double persecution'— one for being a Christian and one for being a woman." As for specific numbers: "At least six women every day are raped, sexually harassed or forced into marriage to a Muslim man under the threat of death for their Christian faith..."

The "Independent Review into the global persecution of Christians," led by Rev. Philip Mounstephen, the Bishop of Truro, and published in early 2019, states:

"Evidence shows not only the geographic spread of anti-Christian persecution, but also its increasing severity. In some regions, the level and nature of persecution is arguably coming close to meeting the international definition of genocide, according to that adopted by the UN."

The bishop's detailed report, which was commissioned by then British Foreign Secretary Jeremy Hunt, concluded that the persecution of Christians is near "genocide" levels.

Both studies make clear that most of the persecution occurs in the Muslim world. In seven of the top ten worst nations, "the primary cause of persecution is Islamic oppression," notes Open Doors. Additionally, 38 of the 50 nations that persecute Christians the most are Muslim-majority.

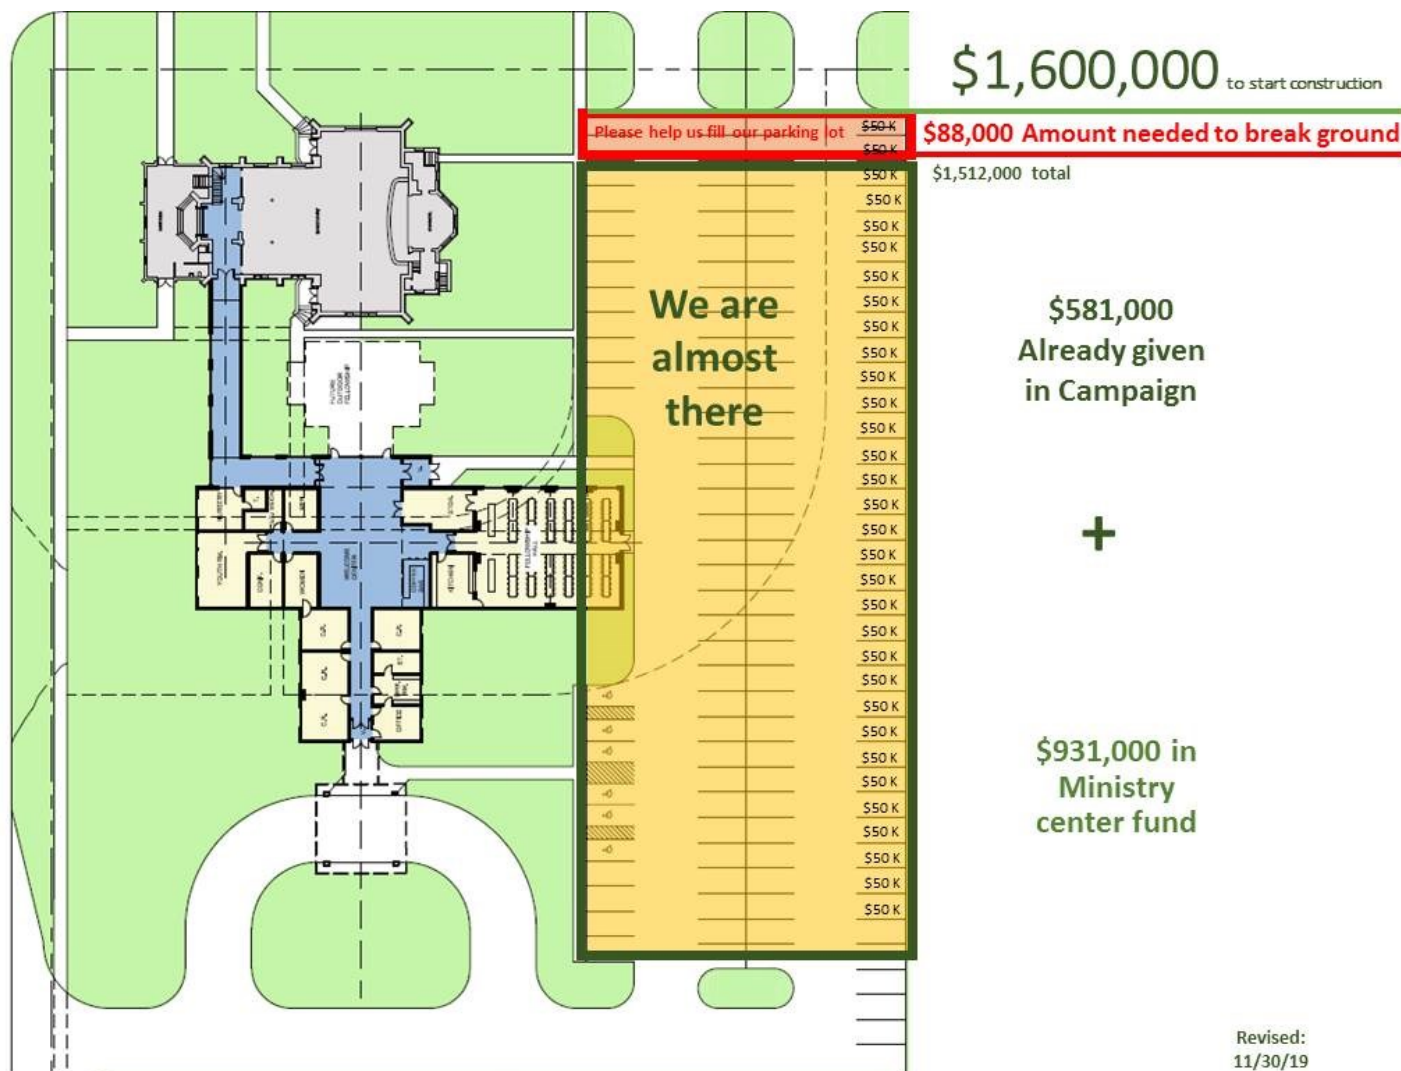

The Bishop of Truro's report gives specifics:

- "The persecution of Christians is perhaps at its most virulent in the region of the birthplace of Christianity — the Middle East & North Africa."
- "Christianity now faces the possibility of being wiped-out in parts of the Middle East where its roots go back furthest. In Palestine, Christian numbers are below 1.5 percent; in Syria the Christian population has declined from 1.7 million in 2011 to below 450,000 and in Iraq, Christian numbers have slumped from 1.5 million before 2003 to below 120,000 today."
- "In countries such as Algeria, Egypt, Iran, Iraq, Syria and Saudi Arabia the situation of Christians and other minorities has reached an alarming stage."
- "[T]here is mass violence which regularly expresses itself through the bombing of churches, as has been the case in countries such as Egypt, Pakistan, and Indonesia."
- "The single-greatest threat to Christians [in Nigeria] ... came from Islamist militant group Boko Haram, with US intelligence reports in 2015 suggesting that 200,000 Christians were at risk of being killed... Those worst affected included Christian women and girls 'abducted, and forced to convert, enter forced marriages, sexual abuse and torture.'"
- "An intent to erase all evidence of the Christian presence [in Syria, Iraq, Egypt, north-east Nigeria and the Philippines] was made plain by the removal of crosses, the destruction of Church buildings and other Church symbols. The killing and abduction of clergy represented a direct attack on the Church's structure and leadership."

Outside the Muslim world, the persecution of Christians is also getting significantly worse, particularly North Korea, where "never-ending pressure and violence" is directed against Christians. In India, for the first time in modern history, Christians are experiencing "extreme persecution."

In the end, numbers and statistics will never adequately capture the magnitude of the problem. "Too many to count, too many unknown," states the video by International Day of Prayer for the Persecuted Church, "All because they bear the name of Jesus."
