

Meet Adam Drummond, Ed.D

Dr. Adam Drummond has served the educational community in many roles, as a teacher, district professional, learning coordinator, university adjunct professor, school principal, and most importantly, as a life-long learner. He believes that to effect the change needed for successful 21st-century learning, we need to commit to growth at all levels of leadership; that means teachers, coaches, principals, superintendents, as well as students. Adam has spent the past 15 years building and sharing his expertise in literacy, leadership development, and systemic planning with schools and districts and is lucky to share this passion with the broader ICLE community. Adam is a firm believer that learning is not restricted to the classroom!
