

We are all just people with our own stories to tell.

In the following pages you will find talented writers who are all on their own individual journeys, but together we become a community that shares happiness and distress and amendments with each other. We begin as innocent children, but time changes us and we get caught up in our mistakes with regret. We are constantly fighting wars of the world and of ourselves, forgetting that we can ask for help to lift these burdens from our shoulders. Through the conflict of this world, we can find comfort together. We learn that while we may feel alone at times, we have a supportive family who will always be there.
