

We are recruiting a Medical Writer or Senior Medical Writer for our growing Editorial team in Sydney

We started with a vision.

We've stuck to our four key principles:

fresh. smart. open. real.

We have a flexible, people-first approach to our work (including employee ownership and a permanent 4-day working week) and are looking for someone great to join our team in to help us become even better. The successful candidate will have:

- Intellectually curious with a knack for distilling complex scientific information into accurate, engaging and effective content
- A flexible and proactive attitude, with the ability to prioritize and work to tight deadlines while maintaining high standards
- A strong foundation in science (typically a degree in a biological or biomedical science)

Reporting to one of our Senior or Principal Medical Writers, and working closely with our Creative and Client Services teams, the successful candidate will:

- Prepare high-quality written materials across a range of media, including slides, manuscripts, posters, meeting reports, websites and apps, under supervision and direction of the strategic and tactical leads
- Build and develop relationships with internal teams and clients, collaborating effectively to deliver projects that add value
- Evaluate scientific data and produce clear and accurate materials
- Provide creative and strategic input in meetings and during project development
- Interact with medical experts across a number of assigned therapeutic areas
- Build and sustain successful client relationships
- Travel to client meetings and events as needed
- Keep abreast of advances and developments in a given therapeutic area
