The story so far...

"My name is Nick Rhodes and I originally started work as a maintenance gardener with a fortnightly round, but before long I was designing and building bespoke garden structures for my clients' gardens.

I started off making basic structures and over time my designs became increasingly intricate and detailed.

I then started making Adirondack Garden Chairs and over the first couple of years, we expanded our Adirondack range as people requested variations on what we were already offering. We moved from our very small workshop into something much bigger and took on some help in the workshop.

Our next product line was our Workbenches. When I first started woodworking I had built 8 workbenches for my workshop and people often asked me if I could make a bench for them.

We started by offering just the basic bench and over time we increased our range to include different worktop thicknesses, materials, shelves, tool wells, and vices. Our Workbench range naturally progressed to include our potting benches (which are the same design but have been treated).

Our latest line of furniture is our Farmhouse Interior Range. We are constantly adding to this and all of these designs can be completely tailored to your requirements including choice of sizes, colours, and finishes.

I hope that you love what you see on our website and welcome your feedback."

~ Nick Rhodes

Adirondack Furniture

Classic, simple, 100-year-old designs offering unrivaled comfort - this is truly the most comfortable garden furniture about!

The wide arms hold a book, a glass, or a cup as comfortably as the shaped timber slats hold you.

As these Adirondack Chairs have already been pressure treated there is never any need to apply any additional paint, varnish, or preservative. Some people prefer to have their Adirondack Chairs painted but this is purely cosmetic.

These Adirondack Chairs make the perfect addition to your garden, conservatory, or summerhouse and you can rest assured that when you buy from us you are making a purchase that will last for years.

Why not combine this chair with our matching folding footstool to turn it into a lounger or our matching table for that little extra space?
