Core Values

While at Elk Hill, young people are oriented to the program’s Core Values, which include learning self-respect, developing personal responsibility, working hard to learn new life skills, demonstrating courage to accept positive changes, and holding one’s education in high regard. All youth leaving Elk Hill have experienced and can demonstrate these same Core Values.

- Respect - To show regard and consideration for the physical, psychological, emotional, spiritual, ethical, moral, and developmental needs of oneself and others.

- Lifelong Learning - Value and seek opportunities to further gain an education; embrace learning as a life-long, all-encompassing activity.

- Responsibility - The act and capacity of making moral judgments for which one then allows oneself to be held accountable; being reliable, trustworthy, and dependable; fulfilling one’s obligations.

- Hard Work - The willingness to engage and show one’s best effort in physically, mentally, socially, or emotionally challenging tasks and activities; perseverance; determination towards success and resolution.
