Lots of audience participation. These are not passive shows – the children will be required to assist both from their seats and the stage throughout the show.

Children are always pleasantly surprised at the level of engagement and fun they have at these shows. Michael is not doing magic to the children, he's doing it with them and involving them throughout by exploring storylines and themes they relate to. These include self-confidence, making choices, the importance of our imaginations, peer pressure, respect, support and more.
