

Latitude Horizon Fund

Investment Objective

The objective of the Latitude Horizon Fund is to deliver capital appreciation over the long term by holding a concentrated portfolio of stocks, whilst lowering the equity risk and enhancing return through a selection of non-equity investments.

October Commentary

That was quick.

In the past month, two of the three key global uncertainties which we discussed in our previous factsheet have been resolved. Or, at least, as resolved as they can be in a year like 2020. It now appears that Joe Biden will take office just as the first doses of virus vaccines are being distributed across America.

Growth expectations have risen, and markets have duly followed suit.

This side of the Atlantic, we do still have Brexit to worry about. Fortunately, the end is clearly nigh, and the consequences for our portfolio of global investments are far less significant than perhaps, sitting here in the UK, we wish to believe.

Investors' eyes will become re-accustomed to the light and opportunities abound. As discussed throughout this year, we have found many new equity investments, steadily reshaping our portfolio since March.

Investing in high quality businesses which are either having a tough year due to external factors (namely, Covid) or those with cyclical earnings streams has rarely been this appealing.

The moves following Pfizer's announcement in the stocks we mentioned last month (namely: Diageo +10%, Heineken +11%, Eiffage +17% and Vinci +19%) indicate fear remains prevalent. The gap in relative attractiveness of these businesses is only just beginning to close.

Meanwhile, stock market indices are near their highs. Accordingly, investors should avoid broadly buying "the market". Its largest constituents are many of the businesses that have had the wind at their backs this year.

Plenty of fund managers have preached about the pitfalls of index investing since their, we think justifiable, path to dominance began a decade ago. However, it is fair to say that, while 2020 has been a cruel year in many ways, the bias created within the market has given investors a once in a generation opportunity to invest in some cyclical (and "temporary cyclical") businesses of the highest quality. It has, at least partly, been due to passive and retail investment demand that these opportunities have presented themselves.

Moreover, somewhere along the way we allowed our politicians to have implicit control of the money supply. 2021 will be the year when monetary policy hands over the baton to fiscal stimulus.

Cyclical stocks will do well as state spending rises, just as the markets determine a higher level of interest rates (discounting potential future inflation) driving the multiples of "Covid secure" growth stocks lower.

Strategy's Previous Track Record¹ - This is a composite of Freddie Lait's performance in long-only global absolute return portfolios principally the Odey Atlas Fund ("Atlas") he managed from 19 October 2012 to 31 October 2016 during his time at Odey Asset Management LLP ("Odey") and Latitude Horizon Fund performance data since launch 1 November 2016. The information above and below is for information purposes, only the Latitude Horizon Fund is being offered for investment. Performance above is for the Atlas Fund I share class, net of fees and other charges. Past performance does not guarantee future results and the value of all investments and the income derived therefrom can decrease as well as increase. Investments that have an exposure to currencies other than the base currency of the strategy may be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. The data above and below reflects the reinvestment of all interest and dividends received. The Latitude Horizon Fund is a long only UCITS fund managed with similar investment guidelines, using the same investment process and subject to similar fees and charges. For full details always refer to the prospectus. While every effort will be made to manage the Latitude Horizon Fund in the same manner there is no guarantee that there will be similar performance. Note that Atlas Fund changed from a long only UCITS fund to a long-short UCITS fund on 23 April 2014. In order to show a consistent long term track record for Freddie Lait which is a more accurate representation of how the Latitude Horizon Fund will be managed, the performance of Atlas in the chart above from 23 April 2014 to 31st October 2016 is a carve-out of his actual long only portfolio over this period, which includes his long only equity and non-equity positions, rebased to cancel out any effects from leverage. Further details on the carve-out are available upon request.
