

Latitude Horizon Fund

Investment Objective

The objective of the Latitude Horizon Fund is to deliver capital appreciation over the long term by holding a concentrated portfolio of stocks, whilst lowering the equity risk and enhancing return through a selection of non-equity investments.

March Commentary

Perhaps the greatest danger facing investors these days is the decision to take insufficient levels of risk.

This is the paradox of financial repression* which robs those with cash of their future purchasing power. One pound held in cash since 2009 is worth around 65p today. And that is despite the low levels of inflation over the past decade.

It's also no secret that conventional government bonds offer far greater risk than reward at this point in the cycle.

Protecting the real value of capital requires risk taking, and a measured investment process is of paramount importance. Shares in businesses with growing intrinsic value continue to offer the best opportunities to investors, although this opportunity doesn't come cheap these days. Markets are between 20% and 40% more expensive than history depending on the metric you use.

We believe that our equity portfolio, which continues to trade at a modest 15x PE (compared to the broader market at nearer 20x) is a differentiator and offers substantial return potential without the valuation risk associated with the broader market.

The second contender for the greatest present danger is taking too much directional risk; betting on one outcome and ending up on the wrong side of history.

Using a rear view mirror to project the future leads to untold harm at points of discontinuity. There is a high probability that we are currently changing course, and exiting such a period at the moment.

The most attractive non-equity investments on our screens are shorter dated inflation-linked bonds. It's likely that we see a transitory spike in inflation, which accrues to investors in these bonds, while central banks will continue to hold interest rates near zero.

If inflation proves to be more structural in nature than transitory, these bonds will fare even better as expectations rise. Likewise, the stock market as a whole will likely suffer as valuations mean revert.

Government interest rates being below inflation. While this may amount to "repression", it would be wrong to assume the superiority of the alternative. When interest rates rise to a level above inflation, the effect on asset prices will vary from painful to catastrophic.*

Strategy's Previous Track Record¹ - This is a composite of Freddie Lait's performance in long-only global absolute return portfolios principally the Odey Atlas Fund ("Atlas") he managed from 19 October 2012 to 31 October 2016 during his time at Odey Asset Management LLP ("Odey") and Latitude Horizon Fund performance data since launch 1 November 2016. The information above and below is for information purposes, only the Latitude Horizon Fund is being offered for investment. Performance above is for the Atlas Fund I share class, net of fees and other charges. Past performance does not guarantee future results and the value of all investments and the income derived therefrom can decrease as well as increase. Investments that have an exposure to currencies other than the base currency of the strategy may be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. The data above and below reflects the reinvestment of all interest and dividends received. The Latitude Horizon Fund is a long only UCITS fund managed with similar investment guidelines, using the same investment process and subject to similar fees and charges. For full details always refer to the prospectus. While every effort will be made to manage the Latitude Horizon Fund in the same manner there is no guarantee that there will be similar performance. Note that Atlas Fund changed from a long only UCITS fund to a long-short UCITS fund on 23 April 2014. In order to show a consistent long term track record for Freddie Lait which is a more accurate representation of how the Latitude Horizon Fund will be managed, the performance of Atlas in the chart above from 23 April 2014 to 31st October 2016 is a carve-out of his actual long only portfolio over this period, which includes his long only equity and non-equity positions, rebased to cancel out any effects from leverage. Further details on the carve-out are available upon request.
