

Latitude Horizon Fund

Investment Objective

The objective of the Latitude Horizon Fund is to deliver capital appreciation over the long term by holding a concentrated portfolio of stocks, whilst lowering the equity risk and enhancing return through a selection of non-equity investments.

April Commentary

Opportunities to make and lose money abound, and both are seemingly being pursued with equal vigour by polarised factions within the investment community.

It's incredibly hard to write anything original about the present phase of this cycle. Hard, and probably superfluous as it seems clear to us that things are about to change.

We are where we are due to the debasement of money by governments and their not-so-independent central banks. The printing and distribution of freshly minted currency (around 25% of "M1 money" in circulation today was created in the past twelve months) has led to a bull market in everything.

Protecting against the continued debasement of money involves taking investment risk.

Protecting against a return to "normal", with price levels reflective of long-term averages, involves managing that risk appropriately.

The Horizon Fund strategy was designed to avoid market timing, by balancing risk across asset classes (and also within them) consistently throughout market cycles.

As we may be nearing a point of discontinuity, when the truths of the last decade are replaced with new ones, it's important to challenge existing assumptions.

For example, the US stock market trades on 22x PE, which is unremarkable these days, despite the very long-term average hovering closer to 15x. This premium may not seem high, but there is a major intrinsic risk in ignoring the lessons of history.

The future is highly uncertain, and this decade may be very different from the last. There is a meaningful risk that valuations revert to their long run averages at some point in the next five years.

Even if earnings per share were to grow at 8% per year indefinitely from here, any return to 15x would result in a loss from holding "the market" over that period. Quite a stark reality if the 2020s are more redolent of years prior to the 2010s.

Those strategies wedded to expensive stocks are concentrating risk to a dangerous degree. The fall in valuations may not happen, but the risk is real and growing in likelihood.

The most important risk control within multi-asset class funds at this point is within the equity portfolio itself and, as discussed in previous factsheets and our commentary for our Latitude Global Fund.

Strategy's Previous Track Record¹ - This is a composite of Freddie Lait's performance in long-only global absolute return portfolios principally the Odey Atlas Fund ("Atlas") he managed from 19 October 2012 to 31 October 2016 during his time at Odey Asset Management LLP ("Odey") and Latitude Horizon Fund performance data since launch 1 November 2016. The information above and below is for information purposes, only the Latitude Horizon Fund is being offered for investment. Performance above is for the Atlas Fund I share class, net of fees and other charges. Past performance does not guarantee future results and the value of all investments and the income derived therefrom can decrease as well as increase. Investments that have an exposure to currencies other than the base currency of the strategy may be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. The data above and below reflects the reinvestment of all interest and dividends received. The Latitude Horizon Fund is a long only UCITS fund managed with similar investment guidelines, using the same investment process and subject to similar fees and charges. For full details always refer to the prospectus. While every effort will be made to manage the Latitude Horizon Fund in the same manner there is no guarantee that there will be similar performance. Note that Atlas Fund changed from a long only UCITS fund to a long-short UCITS fund on 23 April 2014. In order to show a consistent long term track record for Freddie Lait which is a more accurate representation of how the Latitude Horizon Fund will be managed, the performance of Atlas in the chart above from 23 April 2014 to 31st October 2016 is a carve-out of his actual long only portfolio over this period, which includes his long only equity and non-equity positions, rebased to cancel out any effects from leverage. Further details on the carve-out are available upon request.
