

Once a mare is dropped off at our facility, she is reproductively managed in a manner that optimizes her chances of getting in foal. Evaluation of follicle growth, determination of appropriate breeding time, ordering, evaluation and insemination of semen, and assessment of any potential complications are all part of the comprehensive management package. A flat fee is put in place for this service to allow examinations to occur as frequently as needed without burdening the mare owner with rising costs. The result is more accurate prediction of ovulation and time for insemination.

Specialty management may be needed in some mares. These mares typically have a history of abortion, early embryonic death or failure to conceive. A thorough diagnostic evaluation may initially be warranted in order to determine the possible cause(s) of subfertility. The best chances for a sustained pregnancy may only come when these mares undergo very detailed management practices. Routine ultrasound examinations are very important when assessing ovarian or uterine characteristics. Close attention is paid to follicle growth patterns, impending ovulation, uterine edema, cysts, fluid retention within the uterus and insemination frequency and volume. Management of these mares may include minimizing inseminations, performing uterine infusions and lavages, and administering hormonal treatment. We have established a management program to help with the special needs in these mares.
