The Bull at Berkhamsted is the oldest surviving pub in the town. It is mentioned in a rental, for the Brotherhood of St John the Baptist at Berkhamsted in 1535, 'as recently having been sold'. This is a time that would have seen Henry VIII as the ruling monarch, Anne Boleyn his Queen & a two-year-old Elizabeth I. Unfortunately, a more exact date for the listed building & its uniquely shaped front window is unknown. In more modern times, it was mostly a boater's pub, bunks were built into the rafters for stop-overs, & they can still be seen today. The cellar is reportedly haunted by two mischievous boys, who like to grab your ankles & trip you on the stairs!
