

Work / Film

Sirocco Research Labs: Red Moon

Words by Charlotte Simmonds, Friday 16 March 2012

Here's a hilarious gem that's easily worth 14 minutes of your afternoon – if, that is, you're partial to silly Russian accents, low budget special effects and underwater werewolf attacks. Written and directed by Jimmy Marble and Doug Sacrison, Red Moon tells the mournful tale of submarine captain and devout communist turned lycanthrope Alexei Ovechkin. A thoroughly committed effort that ponders the important questions in life – “one starts to wonder how things might have been different if one had not been werewolf.” Trust me comrade, we've all been there!

www.siroccoresearchlabs.com

Words by Charlotte Simmonds, Friday 16 March 2012

Most Recent

Most Popular

Novembre x ECAL explores contemporary attitudes towards the body and beauty

a day ago

Cheap as chips, it's Best of the Web!

a day ago

Get to know the bold and charming work of illustrator Hannah Buckman

a day ago

Ewen Spencer's new editorial for Arena Homme + is a "semi autobiographical" voyage through time

a day ago

Mr Bingo on crowdsourcing then drawing 24 dancing, naked models for his 2017 advent calendar

a day ago

Friday Mixtape: Protomartyr's Joe Casey on his striking and poignant DIY artwork

a day ago

