- HOW TO PLAY:
 - Four Square is played very much like Two Square.
 - However, Four Square utilizes a larger court and more players.
 - The size of the court can range from 8' by 8' for the younger students to 16' by 16' for the upper elementary grades.
 - The court consists of four equal squares, with each labeled A, B, C, and D.
 - The server's square is normally marked off with a line drawn diagonally across the A square.
 - Before play begins, each of the players assumes a standing position in one of the four squares.
 - The server (A) starts the game by bouncing the playground ball behind the serving line and, with an open hand, bats it into one of the other squares.
 - The player receiving the serve must let it bounce once before hitting it into another square.
 - Play continues until a fault has been committed by one of the four players.
 - A fault is any one of the following:
 - Stepping over the line while serving
 - Hitting a ball out of bounds
 - Hitting a line with the ball
 - Failing to return a hit made to your square
 - Using an overhand throw or fist to hit the ball

- When a fault has occurred, the players shift positions.
 - If the server (A) commits a fault, he moves to square D, D moves to C, C moves to B, and B becomes the next server.
 - The objective is to move up a square after each fault and eventually become the server.
- When playing with only four players, the one who committed a fault moves to square D and the others rotate to fill in empty squares.
 - However, if a game has more than four players, the one who commits a fault leaves the court and joins the line of players waiting to get back into the game.
 - A player from front of the line moves into square D and the other three players move up one square.
- One of the best things about Four Square is that there is no declared winner at the end.
 - The players that make the fewest mistakes are simply rewarded with the greatest amount of playing time.
- In addition to regular Four Square, there are many different variations of the game using the same court.
