How to Effectively Support Students by Engaging Families

Are you looking for a proven-effective tool to address the social and emotional needs of students and families?

BRRIM, the Brief Risk Reduction Interview and Intervention Model, is a step-by-step evidence-based interview and planning tool which includes families in student support. The result is actionable plans, connection to resources, and – most importantly – student safety and success.

- Engages students and families in a safe, structured approach
- Provides equity for families that need it the most
- Reduces suspensions with no need for suspension alternatives
- Cost-effective, leveraging existing resources
- Keystone tool for Student Assistance Programs
- Complements all school resources and curriculum
- BRRIM is a Golden Bell award recipient with over 35 years of implementation.

Who should attend? Anyone who supports students and families:

- School counselors
- Student intervention specialists
- Other school support staff
- Psychologists
- Treatment centers
- Community-based organizations
- Prevention coordinators
