the Covid-19 pandemic. Callers with disabilities were discussed as they self-identified, the top inquiry for disability community was counseling. Disability benefits and cost of living in CT discussed.

- b. Tanya Barrett discussed 211 CT Specialized crisis intervention services. Statistics shared from 2020 included 33% of calls were crisis calls. ACTION line services discussed as well as the Youth Mobile Crisis Intervention Services.*
- c. Doris Maldonado asked what guidelines are in place for providers/schools/mandated reporters? Tanya Barrett responded that they provide services before families have to go to the next level of emergency medical personnel. Meghan Peterson asked if school resource officers from CT are trained in 211 resources. Tanya Barrett responded no, only through DCF. Lisa Tepper Bates followed up that they would like to provide trainings throughout the state. Rayla Mattson asked what the best way to reach 211 was. Tanya Barrett responded that if you can't dial 211 for any reason, they also have a 1-800 number. Gretchen Knauff asked if the 1-800 number worked for out of state callers. Tanya Barrett responded yes. Doris Maldonado inquired further on mandated trainings. Lisa Tepper Bates responded they are open to provide training to any of their providers, but they do not mandate it. Andrew Clark asked where 911 and 211 intersect. Lisa Tepper Bates responded that they are working to create a rubric on when to call 911 versus 211. Meghan Peterson asked if 211 has a public education campaign in the works. Lisa Tepper Bates responded that they have a pilot program in the works.*
