

Peace of Mind

Wherever you are

Whenever your circumstances change

There are many things that can't be written in a Will. But they are still very important. Like your funeral and other end of life wishes. Maybe where your Will is stored, or details of your beloved pets.

If you are no longer around, how will your loved ones know about these things?

Now you can protect your important life information and personal wishes by recording and storing them in your Anticipate Life digital information locker.

Gold Coast based partner Bernadette Fulton explains that having an Anticipate Life account ensures that the loved ones we leave behind will be clear about our final wishes and instructions.

"With this information available to your family," says Bernadette, "you can avoid the confusion and uncertainty which arises when no one is sure where to find documents and information they need after a family member's death."

Perth based partner Leanne Russell adds: "Since launching Anticipate Life earlier this year the response has been amazing. People are becoming aware of the benefits it offers. And lawyers have been quick to recognise the value of the product as a useful adjunct to a Will."

"Anticipate Life is all about being organized and prepared," stresses Bernadette. "Your information is confidential and secure and can't be lost or mislaid. And with internet access you can easily amend or update any of your details at any time."

Read-only access to your information is provided after your death to the persons you nominate. And first class security ensures subscriber data is safeguarded.

As many more of us embrace new lifestyles these benefits are attractive. You may be planning to move house, downsize, or join the tribe of grey or younger 'digital' nomads.

With an Anticipate Life account, you don't have to take paperwork with you. You can enjoy the freedom and peace of mind that comes with knowing that, even if the unexpected happens, your loved ones will know what to do.

Recording important life information and end of life wishes

Anticipate Life has launched a new online product which safely stores your life information and end of life wishes in one confidential location.

This unique product is the result of two years of development by four Australian partners, Gold Coast residents Bernadette and Max Fulton and Perth based Paul Kamarudin and Leanne Russell.

Bernadette explains: “We see this product as a terrific adjunct to a Will. We should all have a Will, of course, but there is a lot of important information that can’t go into a Will. If you don’t store this somewhere now, who will know what to do when you are no longer here?”

The Anticipate Life service offers a simple, secure way of leaving clear instructions and information by providing a place for you to record all the details your loved ones will need when you die.

You can use your personal digital locker to record your funeral and other end of life wishes, saving your loved ones the worry and uncertainty of not knowing what you wanted. You can record your accountant’s contact details, where your Will is stored, and details of your beloved pet, so that your executor has this information available when needed.

“There are many advantages of storing your wishes online,” adds Bernadette. “The information cannot be thrown out accidentally or lost when you move or downsize. It is all stored in a single location, and you can access and amend your information as your circumstances change.”

‘Read- only’ access is provided after your death to the persons you nominate.

Max explains that feedback on the service shows that it is a real comfort for those left behind, knowing they are following the wishes of their loved ones. And this relieves much of the stress surrounding decisions which must be made quickly, at what is already a difficult time for family.

As lawyers, Bernadette and Max have seen many instances of family conflict and unhappiness because a Will doesn’t usually provide sufficient clarity around funeral wishes or detailed distribution and inheritance instructions. They stress that Anticipate Life’s service fills these gaps.

Subscriber data is safeguarded by the same infrastructure and robust encryption and privacy protocols as icloud or gmail. Bernadette confirms, “Our online security is first-class and so is the emotional security our users get from using Anticipate Life.”

Subscriptions start from just $5 per month.
