

Learning to be ADAPTable

Being adaptable is more than simply going with the flow. Being adaptable means you are able to pivot on your journey. As obstacles and challenges arise, rather than being defeated or overcome, you find a way to overcome them. As changes happen in the workplace, you learn to be successful in the new environment. Quite simply you find ways to be successful no matter the environment.

Adaptability is a key skill, similar to emotional intelligence, this skill will allow you to thrive anywhere. As you develop this skill you are able to understand some changes are out of your control and adapting to them, finding ways to thrive and be successful is the only option. This skill, also known as pivoting, means you can shift as needed, you never lose your focus, and you place value on the journey. As the business world continues to change, learning to be adaptable will determine those who are successful versus those who simply survive.