

What is Perspective?

When we lookup “perspective” in the dictionary we find several definitions for the word as it is used in different sciences or disciplines. When we analyze all the meanings and how perspective is used we discover that there is one main effect on every discipline where the word has been associated with, and there are more than what the dictionary tells us, for perspective is much more than a simple noun, it is more of a lens for us to see through to enhance the result and what we see.

For example, in drafting it means that through the use of angles and sizes we present a three-dimensional representation of the object in the drawing, and beyond the third dimension, we can also convey the effect of distance and how we see objects that are closer or farther from us, this includes the different sizes of buildings and objects that are part of the drawing. All the great artists use perspective in their paintings, Raphael, Michelangelo, and Leonardo Da Vinci are three examples, they were more than painters, they were also architects and teachers that took perspective to new heights that included size, distance, and light.

Another definition of the word denotes an attitude toward a point of view or a thought that we need to convey to our audience. If we look at how perspective is applied to sound we can understand how a two or more speaker bar placed in front of us can give the impression that some sounds are behind us, or to the left or right of us, and different distances, this is called spatial distribution in perceived sound.

Perspective is used across a multitude of subjects or disciplines, which makes it a tool as well. Tools are used in a multitude of ways and have different uses for each of us. There are far more important tools for us, for example, tools that we can use to make our lives easier, to help us navigate the tempestuous waters of daily life, and to take control of our emotions and feelings, and to dispel the gloom of life in general and the feeling of being alone in the world.

Join Undeclared Mind Gulley and Sara Orellana-Paape to learn how taking control of your perspective, allows you to leverage your passions to achieve your goals. Gain the tools needed to overcome challenges and obstacles. Hear from the pair as they share their tools and tactics to staying motivated in a pandemic. Complete your transformation by participating in a boxing class designed to provide you with tools to use in your everyday life.

We have partnered with Bad Boys Fitness and Boxing to bring you an afternoon event to provide you with tools to use perspective in your life in a positive way, to help you navigate out of the drudgery of life as we know it at this point. Join us November 13 at the gym to participate on this event. Space is limited, so please buy your tickets early at our company store.