REFLECTION

I have never been the sort of person who enjoys a mirror – or mirrors. Apparently I suffer from eisoptrophobia. I bet you haven't come across that word too often! Even from an early age I haven't enjoyed looking at myself. As a nineteen-year-old, I didn't realise that I had a rapidly receding hairline until it was pointed out to me and now, at the tender age of 68, it's not unusual for me to leave the house to go shopping with either toothpaste around my mouth or traces of shaving foam by my ears – usually my right ear. Have you noticed how we have an 'expert' for everything these days – they all want to share their insights and wisdom? Some of them have warned us of the damage that is being visited on the young of today who feel under so much pressure to have bodies to be envied, complexions that are flawless and fashions that are unrivalled and cutting edge. They warn of the dangers of comparisons

Comparisons are odious and counterproductive. Oscar Wilde once gave some very apt advice: 'Be yourself – for every other self has been taken'. In this weekend's Gospel Jesus is approached by two of the disciples who, perhaps, feel themselves to be slightly more important than some of their colleagues. They have cast their eyes over the 'competition' and decide to stake their claim on a favoured seat in God's kingdom. They receive a gentle put down from Jesus and generate indignation from the other ten: When the other ten heard this, they began to feel indignant. Jesus warns against the attitude that suggests we can 'LORD It over others', adding their great men make their authority felt, THIS IS NOT TO HAPPEN WITH YOU. He tells them and us that the one who wants to be great does so by being servant of all. Greatness is not stature, Greatness is rooted in humility – we do not say, 'I am better than him or her – all we need to say is 'I have done my best – I couldn't have tried any harder.

Last weekend's London Marathon saw 80,000 participants. There was only one winner. Were the other 79,999 all losers? All of them had a target time, a personal best to be beaten. They did as much as they could - and they are ALL winners. We do our best – and in God's eyes, that is enough.
