FIRECLAY SINKS

Fireclay sinks are made out of ceramic and molded at high temperatures. Once the clay is dry, porcelain enamel is coated on top and the sink is put inside of a kiln. During the heating process, the enamel and ceramic are fused together, which creates an incredibly strong sink.

These sinks feature smooth, sturdy surfaces. Fireclay sinks are sometimes mistaken for high-quality cast iron sinks.

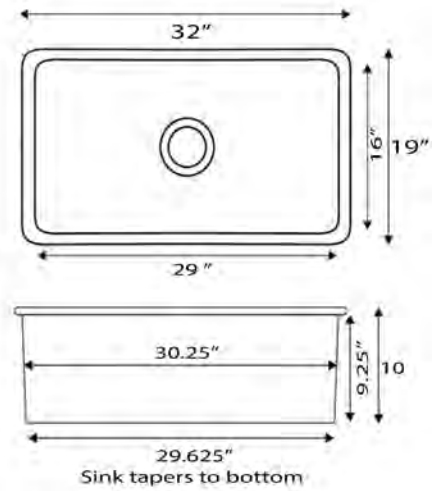

These handcrafted sinks look especially appropriate in rustic style kitchens. However, they are gaining appeal in kitchens with contemporary designs as well.
