Global Reinsurer pins U.S. social inflation on third-party litigation

In a December 2021 report, reinsurance company Swiss Re designated third-party litigation finance (TPLF) as a major contributor to U.S. social inflation. The report defines TPLF as investors financing consumer or commercial litigation either through non-recourse loans (no repayment without a recovery) or by accepting legal assets as collateral.

Welcome to 2022! The year doesn't quite look like we thought it would a few weeks ago, does it? There is the omicron variant wreaking havoc, of course, but the truth is our world—both inside and outside of law—is always complex and unpredictable. To honor that reality, we must control what we can control and adapt to the rest. That's why we established LevelEsq and products such as Litigation Cost Protection in the first place: To empower our clients to more fully own and shape their destiny, whatever may come. And we're proud to stand with you as you take your power back.

Lawsuit Cost Financing

With Lawsuit Cost Financing, you have quick and seamless access to capital to fund your case expenses.
