We're just now seeing the first PCIe Gen 5 SSDs hit the market, and Patriot is joining the party with its Viper PV553. Due out in a month or so, the PV553 has strong specs: a Phison E26 controller and speedy 2,400 MT/s NAND. However, its cooling system is what makes the PV553 stand out.

Patriot's SSD uses active cooling to keep it from throttling under load. However, despite having a fan, the heatsink is extremely thin, allowing it to keep a low profile while delivering rated speeds of 12,400 MBps reads and 11,800 MBps writes. Considering how chunky other Gen 5 SSD thermal solutions have been, this is a nice innovation.
