Valuations Matter

Great companies make great investments but price matters. We would rather watch from the sidelines than pay a price that will lead to a subpar return. .

Framing+Timing

We make frequent use of the 'too hard' pile. If an idea is great but the assumptions required to make it work are too stretched we place the idea in the 'too hard' pile.

Expertise

We are engineers, investors and operators, we appreciate the best insights are simple and garnered from experience.. We are permanently learning.

Due Diligence

Do the work and never rely on others' opinions. Too often in our industry people rely on other peoples

How we work

Embacy's three main principles

High speed and working in sprints

We understand how important it is for digital companies to be fast, so we work in weekly sprints. In just a month we can create a powerful and business oriented brand identity, and in another month we can create a website that will fully meet business requirements.

Mindful design

In our perspective design is not a fancy picture, it is a tool that solves the business task. Design concepts and metaphors are the essentials that help to solve the task the client has — to be unique and stand out.

Total transparency

Before starting the project, we inform the client about the deadline, scope of work, and the result. All our clients have constant access to Figma and Notion, where the entire workflow takes place. Transparency of communication with the clients is ensured through regular calls and e-mails about the status of the project.
