As shown in the table above, Coinberry meets and exceeds its mandate requiring 80% of customer funds to be held in cold wallet storage. The percentages of customer funds held in cold wallet storage for all currencies exceeds 90% with Bitcoin, Ethereum, Bitcoin Cash, Basic Attention Token, Curve DAO Token, Compound, Cosmos, and Algorand exceeding 95%. In total, 96.28% of Coinberry's client funds across all tokens are stored in their cold wallet storage.

Coinberry Limited is committed to preventing, detecting, and deterring money laundering and terrorist financing (ML/TF) activities. The platform administers its Anti-Money Laundering policy by requiring its customers to fulfill KYC requirements upon registration.

Coinberry requires its users to be verified before they can use the platform. Verification includes furnishing an official ID document and going through video verification. Once this is done, the platform asks eight questions to assess the investor's suitability. These include questions about the user's risk tolerance, the percentage of net liquid assets they intend to invest on the platform, their annual income and total net worth, etc.

Legally operating as "Coinberry", Coinberry Limited. is a subsidiary of WonderFi Technologies Inc. (TSX: WNDR), a publicly traded company in Canada. WonderFi is backed by strategic investors such as Canadian entrepreneur and TV personality Kevin O'Leary.

Currently, Coinberry only offers its services to Canadian users. Its products include a dollar-cost averaging trading strategy called Coinberry autopilot, and Coinberry Pay for merchants to accept payments in Cryptocurrencies. These products are delivered through Coinberry's website and app.

Adverse Media:

While screening for adverse media identified with Coinberry only one recent negative news report surfaced while other media reports were largely positive. Notable adverse and propitious media reports identified are as follows:

Sep 8, 2022 (Coindesk) – Following a software glitch in 2020, Coinberry sued 50 individuals who together withdrew 120 bitcoins (BTC). A fault in Coinberry's Interfac e-transfer software upgrade allowed users to siphon off the bitcoin with Canadian dollars that were on their way but hadn't yet been received by Coinberry, according to a court document seen by CoinDesk. Over 500 users first took advantage of the flaw, and 37 bitcoins were later returned at Coinberry's request.⁵

July 4, 2022 (Coindesk) – After being approved to trade on the Toronto Stock Exchange last week, cryptocurrency marketplace WonderFi (WNDR) concluded its $30 million acquisition of Canadian cryptocurrency trading platform Coinberry on Monday. At the opening, the shares increased by almost 9%. According to WonderFi, the purchase has received approval from the Ontario Securities Commission, Competition Bureau Canada, and other provincial regulatory bodies.⁶

August 23, 2021 (Blockworks) – Coinberry announced today that it has become a registered securities dealer with the Ontario Securities Commission. This provincial registration means that Coinberry also get a subsequent national registration from the Canadian Securities Association.⁷

March 28, 2019 (Business Wire) – The Town of Innisfil will be the first local government in Canada to accept cryptocurrency as a means of paying real estate taxes as Coinberry Limited offers the service to locals as part of a one-year trial project, as approved by the Innisfil Council.⁸

Proof of Reserve Factors:

- Cold Wallet Storage Audit – Average 96.28% of Funds Held in Cold Wallet Storage

Coinberry's policies explicitly describe KYC/AML procedures, which were verified at the time of review. The company and its parent organization hold the appropriate licensing and registration with the Canadian federal government and the Financial Transactions and Reporting Analysis Centre. There is very little adverse media surrounding Coinberry. Furthermore, Blockchain Intelligence Group has validated Coinberry's cold wallet reserves to meet and exceed their mandate of 80%. Based on the research findings, Coinberry is at a lower risk for theft, fraud, money laundering, sanctions evasion, and terrorist financing.
