Luther and Doubt

Doubt takes many forms: Doubt about God's forgiveness and care for oneself or others. Doubt that God exists at all. Doubt that life has meaning. Doubt that justice is achievable amid human evil. Doubt that human experts and authorities are reliable. What are the sources and varieties of modern doubt, and what theological resources can be found in Luther and the Lutheran tradition for thinking about doubt? What is the relationship of doubt to faith? How might a Lutheran doctrine of faith today provide assurance of God's presence and favor—in oneself, in the church, in the world?

The Gospel of Irresolution: A theology of the cross for the Undone

Dr. Deanna A. Thompson, Director of the Lutheran Center for Faith, Values, and Community and Martin E. Marty Regents Chair in Religion and the Academy, St. Olaf College

Trauma, Memory, and Doubt: Luther on Anfechtungen and the Flow of Divine Love

Natalia Marandiuc, Associate Professor of Systematic Theology; Director Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies program, United Lutheran Seminary

On Certainty, Proper Confidence, and Doubt: A Post-Foundationalist and Critical Realist Epistemology for doing Constructive Theology

Veli-Matti Kärkkäinen, Professor of Systematic Theology, Fuller Theological Seminary; Docent of Ecumenics, University of Helsinki

When credulity is short-circuited by doubt: Faith as an emergent phenomenon
