How should curriculum be evaluated in the near and far term? What are metrics you expect to be used to measure the success of police, fire, and E911 training?

What does de-escalation look like from a community context? What is, if any, the intensity we want to train in de-escalation?

What groups do you expect to partner in development in the curriculum?

What specificity do you expect to be included in curriculum?

To what extent should community be included in the development of curriculum? Should it be an iterative process to improve curriculum over time? What does that look like?

What other forms of tactical approaches can be used?

What other ways can transparency be developed in this process? Is it news media, reports, regular community events on or around the campus?

Where is there crossover in the ways police, fire, and E911 can collaborate?
