In the game, certain characters have specific finishing moves that require precise inputs and conditions. For Jade, the move "What Would Mileena Do" requires a combination of back, forward, X, and R1, with rapid pressing of Square/X and Triangle/Y during the hit. The final blow must be delivered by an amplified Pole Vault. Jax Briggs has a move called "Slow Clap," which can only be executed when he is fully heated up, ending with a lethal clap. Johnny Cage's "$500 Sunglasses" move necessitates a hit from a significant distance, concluding with "Throwing Shades." The Joker's "Playful Puppet" should not be blocked in the final round, and the last hit must come from 'Puppet Parry.' Kabal needs to connect with at least three Nomad Dashes before finishing with a Nomad Dash. Kano's "Not Lookin' Good" requires holding down during the throw, with the final hit coming from a back throw. Kitana's "Deadly Lips" demands a mercy performance before the final back throw. The Kollector's "Shaken" move requires the player to be below 50 percent health and to hold down during the hit, ending with a "Taxed Kombo." Lastly, Kotal Kahn's "Back Stabber" involves holding L1 during a throw, with the final hit coming from a back throw, while "Burnt" uses the God Ray or Tonatiuh Beam to finish the opponent. comment rédiger un guide These moves are integral to the characters' abilities and require players to meet specific conditions to execute them successfully in the game. nijiciyihixu Mortal Kombat 11: Aftermath offers a satisfying conclusion that the series deserves and is now available on various gaming platforms including PS4, Xbox One, PC, and Nintendo Switch. While Fatalities are a staple of Mortal Kombat 11, I've recently developed a preference for Brutalities.
