The Law Enforcement Automated Data System (LEADS) offers two levels of operator certification: Fully Qualified Operator (FQO) and Inquiry Only Operator (INO). An FQO has comprehensive privileges, including the ability to enter, cancel, clear, modify, query, locate, detain, and confirm hits. In contrast, an INO is limited to querying, locating, and confirming hits. Operators using Mobile Data Terminals (MDTs) must possess either FQO or INO certification to use LEADS access devices. LEADS practitioners, although not certified, are authorized to handle LEADS data.

contrast, an INQ is limited to querying, locating, and confirming hits. Operators using Mobile Data Terminals (MDTs) must possess either FOO or INQ certification to use LEADS access devices. LEADS practitioners, although not certified, are authorized to handle LEADS data. Certified operators are trained in the LEADS Manual, Administrative Rules, Security Policy, Newsletters, TAC In-Service Training Material, NCIC Manual, NLETS User Policy Manual, and BCI Manual. It's important to note that LEADS information is exclusively shared for criminal justice purposes. Misuse of the LEADS system is a serious offense, classified as a felony of the fifth degree under the revised code. Practitioners must strive for accuracy, completeness, and conciseness in their communications to ensure the proper use of LEADS. Completing the Lead-Safe Work Practices Quiz is essential for those seeking a Completion form, which may be necessary for obtaining a building permit in various jurisdictions. It's crucial that the quiz is taken by the individual whose name is entered for the certification.
