The iconic Beacon Theatre in New York City has a seating chart that's notorious for being puzzling. To help you navigate this famous venue, we've included pictures and detailed seating charts with row & seat numbers (see exact seat numbers below). Additionally, discover where the best seats are, where to avoid sitting, and how to find similar Beacon Theatre seats at 10% cheaper prices than our leading competitor. The seating chart is organized in a way that makes it easy for ushers to direct you based on your ticket. The right side of the venue has even seat numbers (2, 4, 6, 8, etc.), while the left side has odd seat numbers (1, 3, 5, 7, etc.). Seats closer to the center have lower numbers, with consecutive numbers in the center sections (101, 102, 103, etc.). The Beacon Theatre Seating Chart (hover over any section for a row-by-row breakdown) highlights three center orchestra sections. All seats offer great views, except those marked "partial view." Some seats in rows S to Y are obstructed by the soundboard. In the loge, be aware that the lower balcony's overhang affects rows C to J. This doesn't affect the view but may impact the sound quality. Additionally, note that the loge overhangs the orchestra at row O. The lower and upper balconies form one section, with a split between them. The view changes significantly between these areas, but so do ticket prices. For unobstructed views at affordable prices, consider seats on the sides of the lower or upper balcony. In my opinion, the best seats for a concert are usually the first few rows of the loge or the first 10 rows of any center orchestra section. Side orchestra seats can also be a great deal, depending on the seat numbers. Lastly, note that Beacon Theatre offers handicapped and ADA seating options for those who require accessible seating. Important Info About Beacon Theatre: If you're looking for ADA or handicapped seating, you can usually find accessible rows at the top of the lower levels. If needed, folding chairs will be provided for guests with mobility issues. You can filter tickets by using the "Additional filters +" button and selecting "ADA (wheelchair accessible)" to show all marked handicapped seats. Cheaper Tickets: TickPick doesn't charge high service fees like other ticket marketplaces. Sign up with our link below for $10 off your first purchase!
