The Used to Celebrate 25 Years with Iconic TourThe Used will embark on a special tour next year, celebrating their 25th anniversary as a band. The tour will feature three shows in each city, with each night dedicated to performing a different album in full: "The Used" (2000), "Love and Death" (2004), and "Lies for the Liars" (2007).The Used emerged in the early 2000s as a key act in the "screamo" genre, drawing comparisons to Thursday, Taking Back Sunday and My Chemical Romance. With their distinctive blend of hard rock and post-hardcore, they have built a reputation as formidable live performers, characterized by vocalist Bert McCracken's emotive vocals and a high-energy show featuring strobe lights.Their latest full-length album, Vulnerable, showcased more theatrical elements and led with the single "I Come Alive." The band supported this album with the Vulnerable Tour 2012 and reissued it as a two-disc set in March 2013. Formed in Orem, Utah, The Used gained recognition despite their non-rock background, with guitarist Quinn Allman, bassist Jepth Howard, drummer Branden Steineckert, and McCracken honing their craft in local clubs before touring extensively.The band's breakthrough came with the 2004 album In Love and Death, which peaked at No. 6 on Billboard's Top 200 and spawned singles such as "Take it Away" and "All That I've Got." Following drummer Branden Steineckert's departure in 2006, The Used released Vulnerable through their own label, Dental Records, accompanied by a series of concerts that summer. In subsequent years, the band has continued to tour and release new material, including an EP titled The Ocean of the Sky, which hinted at potential future tours.Currently, The Used is rumored to be embarking on a 2014 tour, although no official announcements have been made. They are scheduled to appear at the Rockstar Energy Drink DISRUPT Festival in 2019 and will perform dates across Australia in August 2025.The Used is set to perform at various venues across North America and Europe in October and November 2025.
