Bernadette Peters' 'Stella is a Star' : A Heartwarming Tale of Friendship Getting a new puppy can be a challenge, especially when introducing it to an older dog. I often wonder what goes through their minds as they try to understand each other. The thought of bubbles filled with conversations between the two dogs makes me smile! Furever Friends is a cute book that explores the story of Stella and Charlie learning to become friends despite initial jealousy. As we embark on this journey, it's natural to ponder how far we'd go to help a dog in need. What would you expect from an older dog welcoming a new one? It's fascinating to think about the states they visit along the way. December 31, 2023 Bernadette Peters is an American actress and singer born on February 28, 1948. She has had a long career spanning over six decades in musical theatre, television, film, solo concerts, and recordings. Peters is known for her critically acclaimed Broadway performances, including seven Tony Award nominations and three wins. Given article text here Jessica Tandy and Margaret Hamilton.[10] She first appeared on the New York stage at age 10 as Tessie in the New York City Center revival of The Most Happy Fella (1959).[11] In her teen years, she attended Quintano's School for Young Professionals, a now-defunct private school.[8] At age 13, Peters appeared as one of the "Hollywood Blondes" and was an understudy for "Dainty June" in the second national tour of Gypsy.[12] During this tour, Peters first met her long-time accompanist, conductor and arranger Marvin Laird, who was the assistant conductor for the tour. Laird recalled, "I heard her sing an odd phrase or two and thought, 'God that's a big voice out of that little girl'".[13] The next summer, she played Dainty June in summer stock, and in 1962 she recorded her first single. In 1964, she played Liesl in The Sound of Music and Jenny in Riverwind in summer stock at the Mt. Gretna Playhouse (Pennsylvania), and Riverwind again at the Bucks County Playhouse in 1966.[14][15][16] Upon graduation from high school, she started working steadily, appearing Off-Broadway in the musicals The Penny Friend (1966) and Curley McDimple (1967)[11] and as a standby on Broadway in The Girl in the Freudian Slip (1967). She made her Broadway debut in Johnny No-Trump in 1967, and next appeared as George M. Cohan's sister Josie opposite Joel Grey in George M! (1968), winning the Theatre World Award.[17] Peters's performance as "Ruby" in the 1968 Off-Broadway production of Dames at Sea, a parody of 1930s musicals, brought her critical acclaim and her first Drama Desk Award.[11] She had appeared in an earlier 1966 version of Dames at Sea at the Off-Off-Broadway performance club Caffe Cino.[18][19][20] Peters had starring roles in her next Broadway vehicles—Gelsomina in the 1969 musical version of the Italian film of the same name, La Strada (for which she won good reviews but the show closed after one performance) and Hildy in a revival of On the Town (1971), for which she received her first Tony Award nomination. She played Mabel Normand in Mack and Mabel (1974), receiving another Tony nomination. Clive Barnes wrote: "With the splashy Mack & Mabel ... diminutive and contralto Bernadette Peters found herself as a major Broadway star."[21] The Mack and Mabel cast album became popular among musical theatre fans.[11] She moved to Los Angeles in the early 1970s to concentrate on television and film work.[citation needed] Peters appeared in more than 40 feature films or television films beginning in 1973, including the 1976 Mel Brooks film Silent Movie for which she was nominated for a Golden Globe Award for Best Supporting Actress – Motion Picture. She co-starred in her own television series, All's Fair, with Richard Crenna in 1976–77. Peters played a young, liberal photographer, who becomes romantically involved with an older, conservative columnist. Although Peters was praised for her charismatic performance, the show ran for only one season.[22] Peters was nominated for a Golden Globe award as Best TV Actress – Musical/Comedy.[23] Peters starred opposite Steve Martin in The Jerk (1979) in a role that he wrote for her, and again in Pennies from Heaven (1981), for which she won the Golden Globe Award as Best Motion Picture Actress in a Comedy or Musical.[2][11] In Pennies Bernadette Peters' acting career spanned decades, with a notable role as Eileen Everson in the film Pennies from Heaven. Her performance was praised by John DiLeo, who highlighted her surprising inner strength, while Pauline Kael noted that she "is mysteriously right in every nuance." Peters received a Primetime Emmy nomination for her guest appearance on The Muppet Show and went on to perform at various award ceremonies, including the Academy Awards and Tony Awards. Peters' stage career also flourished, with notable roles in musicals such as Sunday in the Park with George and Into the Woods. Her performance in Song and Dance earned her a Tony Award for Best Leading Actress in a Musical, with Frank Rich praising her "radiant" portrayal of Emma. Peters was nominated for multiple Tony Awards throughout her career and received critical acclaim from renowned writers like Stephen Sondheim, who praised her ability to sing and act flawlessly. Peters' film career included roles in James Ivory's Slaves of New York, the action comedy Pink Cadillac alongside Clint Eastwood, and Woody Allen's Alice. She also appeared in Impromptu as Marie D'Agoult, alongside Hugh Grant and Judy Davis. Peters' versatility as an actress was showcased through her various roles on television and stage, cementing her status as a legendary performer. Bernadette Peters has had a successful career in film and television. One of her most notable roles was as the voice of Rita the stray cat in the animated series Animaniacs. She also appeared in several concerts featuring the work of Stephen Sondheim, including a benefit concert for Anyone Can Whistle. Peters won two Tony Awards for Best Leading Actress in a Musical for her performances in Annie Get Your Gun and Gypsy. In addition to her work on stage, Peters has also had success in film and television. She was nominated for a Primetime Emmy Award for Outstanding Guest Actress in a Comedy Series for her role on the Fox series Ally McBeal. She also appeared on The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson and Live with Regis and Kelly. Peters has been recognized for her contributions to the world of entertainment, including an honorary Tony Award. She has been nominated for several awards, including seven Tony Awards and nine Drama Desk Awards. In addition to her film work, Peters had a notable co-starring role in Adopted, alongside Christine Baranski. However, it didn't receive widespread attention. In 2006, she appeared in Come le formiche (Wine and Kisses) with F. Murray Abraham, where she played an American woman involved with an Italian family's vineyard business. This was followed by readings of the Sondheim-Weidman musical Bounce in 2006 and Love Letters in 2007, a charity event featuring John Dossett. Peters' television work during this period included guest appearances on Will & Grace, Law & Order: Special Victims Unit, Boston Legal, and Grey's Anatomy. Her portrayal in Grey's Anatomy was praised by TV Guide, stating that she delivered a fine performance as an accident victim whose life spirals out of control. In 2009, she took on the role of Jodie Papadakis in Ugly Betty, portraying a magazine mogul overseeing the YETI program. Peters also made appearances at the Adelaide Cabaret Festival and was filmed performing for broadcast in Australia later that month. Notably, she starred in the Broadway revival of A Little Night Music (2010), succeeding Catherine Zeta-Jones as Desirée Armfeldt, receiving praise from The New York Times for her performance. In 2011, Peters took on the role of Sally Durant Plummer in a Kennedy Center production and later reprised it in the Broadway revival at the Marquis Theatre, earning a Drama Desk Award nomination for Outstanding Actress in a Musical. Her Tony Award speech was particularly noteworthy, where she received an honorary award for lifetime achievement. In 2012, Peters received the Isabelle Stevenson Award for her contributions to humanitarian causes, particularly with Broadway Barks. The Tony official site praised her generosity and dedication to performing, stating that her efforts are highly regarded on and off Broadway. She then appeared in the NBC series Smash, playing Leigh Conroy, a retired Broadway star. Peters also starred in the film Coming Up Roses and collaborated with Wynton Marsalis and Stephen Sondheim for A Bed and a Chair: A New York Love Affair at New York City Center. In 2013, she played various roles in Smash, including "The Parents" episode, where she sang an original song. Peters also starred in the staged concert revue at New York City Center, singing songs from Sondheim's catalog. She received praise for her performances, with critics noting her full-throated and sincere delivery. From 2014 to 2018, Peters played Gloria Windsor in Mozart in the Jungle, a web video series based on Blair Tindall's memoir. The show was picked up for additional seasons. She also guest-starred in Girlfriends' Guide to Divorce and appeared as Lenore Rindell in The Good Fight. In 2020, she played Ms. Freesia in Katy Keene. Additionally, Peters returned to Broadway in the title role of the 2017 revival of Hello, Dolly! at the Shubert Theatre, succeeding Bette Midler. Bernadette Peters showcased her acting skills in 'Before the Parade Passes By', where she asked her late husband to bless her decision to rejoin society. Her final performance as Dolly was on July 15, 2018. She then played Deb in Zoey's Extraordinary Playlist (2020-2021) and a TV film in 2021, earning a Primetime Emmy nomination. Peters joined the cast of High Desert in 2023, playing Roslyn. She made her West End debut with Lea Salonga in Stephen Sondheim's Old Friends at the Gielgud Theatre from September 2023 to January 2024. The show is set to transfer to Broadway's Samuel J. Friedman Theatre in March 2025. Peters has recorded six solo albums and singles, with three of her albums nominated for Grammy Awards. Her 1980 single "Gee Whiz" reached the top forty on US Billboard pop charts. She has also recorded cast albums from musicals she appeared in, with four winning Grammy Awards. Peters's debut album in 1980 featured 10 songs, including "If You Were the Only Boy", "Heartquake", and "Should've Never Let Him Go". The original cover painting by Alberto Vargas was one of his last works. According to The New York Daily News, Peters convinced him to create a final portrait. Bernadette Peters' solo career has seen significant milestones with heavy demands placed on her sultry soprano, yet she consistently rises to the occasion. Her second solo album, Now Playing (1981), showcased songs from renowned composers like Jerry Leiber, Mike Stoller, and Stephen Sondheim. The re-release of Bernadette Peters in 1992 included some tracks from Now Playing, making it a valuable part of her discography. Peters continued to impress with the release of I'll Be Your Baby Tonight in 1996, which featured hits by John Lennon, Paul McCartney, Lyle Lovett, and Billy Joel. This album earned her a Grammy nomination, as did Sondheim, Etc. – Bernadette Peters Live At Carnegie Hall, a live recording of her 1996 Carnegie Hall concert. Her subsequent studio albums demonstrated her versatility, with Bernadette Peters Loves Rodgers and Hammerstein (2002) focusing entirely on the works of Rodgers and Hammerstein. This album formed the basis for her Radio City Music Hall solo concert debut in June 2002 and was also nominated for a Grammy Award. Her last solo album, Sondheim Etc., Etc. Live At Carnegie Hall: The Rest of It (2005), consisted of songs from her 1996 Carnegie Hall concert not included in the earlier recording. Peters has collaborated on other albums, such as John Whelan's Flirting with the Edge and Mandy Patinkin's Dress Casual. Her contributions to these projects have been widely praised for their emotional depth and conviction. In a review of Song and Dance (1986), Stephen Holden noted that Bernadette Peters had transformed the material into a touching romantic fable, showcasing her essential ingredient of honesty and compassion in her delivery. She's got a voice that can move you to tears and make you feel alive, not just because it's loud but because it's full of emotions. Her singing is like a rollercoaster of feelings that takes you on a wild ride. People have praised her for being one of the best in her field, and she's always delivering amazing performances that leave everyone in awe. When she sings "Rose's Turn", people are blown away by how good it is - it's like she's taken something great and made it even better. And when she performs with orchestras or at big venues like Carnegie Hall or Radio City Music Hall, she shines like a superstar. People have compared her to Bernadette Peters because of her incredible talent. She's been touring the US and Canada for years, singing songs by Stephen Sondheim, Rodgers, and Hammerstein. She even performed in London and recorded it on VHS, which was shown on American TV channels. Her concerts are always special events that bring people together - she sang at Lincoln Center in 2006 and made everyone feel like they were part of a magic world. She's also performed with big symphony orchestras like the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra and even headlined the Adelaide Cabaret Festival in Australia, where people praised her for being as energetic as someone half her age. Her concerts often help raise money for good causes or celebrate special occasions, like when she sang on a cruise to benefit the Adrienne Arsht Center in Miami. She's always been there for arts organizations and has helped them mark important milestones - like when she performed at the opening of the Arts Plaza in Thousand Oaks, California. She even celebrated Frank Sinatra's 100th birthday with a special concert at Lincoln Center in 2015, singing one of his favorite songs. Bernadette Peters has been touring with her cabaret act "An Evening with Bernadette Peters" and concert series since 2013. In 2014, she gave concerts in Australia, where she was praised by The Sydney Morning Herald for her "natural warmth" and ability to bring out the emotional essence of a song without overdoing it. She has also performed at several venues in the UK, including the Royal Festival Hall and Edinburgh Playhouse. Peters has been involved in various charity efforts, including Broadway Barks, an animal adoption charity she co-founded with Mary Tyler Moore. To support this cause, she wrote three children's books, illustrated by Liz Murphy: "Broadway Barks" (2008), "Stella is a Star" (2010), and "Stella and Charlie Friends Forever" (2015). The latter two books include CDs with original songs written and performed by Peters. Peters has also participated in tribute concerts, including the 2022 "Old Friends" concert at the Sondheim Theatre in London. Her cabaret act features a mix of musical theater and pop music, with past performances featuring notable artists such as Sting and Billy Porter. Peters hosted the Broadway Barks event in July at New York City's Minskoff Theatre, where she also held a concert to benefit Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS and raised $615k. Peters supports various charities, including Broadway Barks, which has facilitated over 2,000 animal adoptions since its inception. In 2018, she received the Brooke Astor Award for her dedication to animal welfare. The first in-person Broadway Barks adoption event since COVID-19 took place in 2022 with many stars attending and shelter organizations participating. Peters serves on the board of trustees for Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS and participates in its events, including the annual Broadway Flea Market and Grand Auction. She is also a member of Standing Tall's Board of Directors, a non-profit educational program offering innovative programs for children with disabilities. Peters has been involved in several benefit concerts throughout her career, including Anyone Can Whistle, Carnegie Hall in 1996, and the "Broadway's Back" concert in 2007 to celebrate the end of the stagehand strike. She presented Michael Bloomberg with a Humanitarian Award at the Breast Cancer Research Foundation awards in 2008 and helped celebrate Senator Ted Kennedy's birthday with a private concert at the Kennedy Center in 2009. Peters has also honored Angela Lansbury, Stephen Sondheim, and participated in the Olivier Awards ceremony, showcasing her support for the arts community. Bernadette Peters: A Timeless Star Bernadette Peters is still luminous in the entertainment industry, renowned for her powerful vocals and versatility on stage and screen. She famously reached the high note at the end of 'Losing My Mind' during performances, a feat rarely attempted by other interpreters. Her personal life has been marked by romantic relationships, including one with comedian Steve Martin that lasted four years. Peters was featured on the cover of Playboy Magazine in 1981 and later married investment adviser Michael Wittenberg, with whom she had a long-lasting marriage until his tragic death in 2005. Throughout her illustrious career, Peters has received numerous accolades, including two Tony Awards, three Drama Desk Awards, and a Golden Globe Award. She has been recognized for her philanthropic work as well, receiving the Isabelle Stevenson Award in 2012 and being named the Hasty Pudding Woman of the Year in 1987. Peters holds a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame and has received numerous honorary awards from institutions such as Hofstra University and the National Dance Institute.
