The Jordan Brand is poised for a monumental year in 2025, and it couldn't come at a more opportune time. Following a decline in hype surrounding the Air Jordan 1, the brand is shifting its focus towards true icons in its Retro product line. This strategic move aims to reignite the passion of the core Air Jordan community while expanding its appeal to a broader audience. In essence, 2025 promises to be a remarkable year for Jordan releases, so it's time to start saving. We've compiled a definitive Power Ranking of the top 25 Air Jordans set to drop in 2025, excluding upcoming Fall and Holiday releases that may potentially supplant some of the current inclusions. Notable omissions from the list include the Travis Scott x Air Jordan 1 Low OG "Sail" and "Dark Pony," both of which have been cancelled, as well as the Air Jordan 4 "Rare Air" and Air Jordan 1 Low '85 "Royal." The rankings commence with the Air Jordan 12 "French Blue," slated for a return in Fall 2025, followed by the Air Jordan 12 "Melo," which initially dropped in 2004. Other notable releases include the Air Jordan 10 "Steel," Air Jordan 11 Low "Bred," and Air Jordan 9 "Cool Grey," although the latter has been largely relegated to golf. As the year unfolds, we anticipate updates to this list, potentially displacing some of the current entries. Mock-up images are courtesy of @zsneakerheadz.
