La finale de cette dition 2024-2025 a t fixe au samedi 24 mai 2025.The 108th edition of France's main football cup competition was underway in 2024-25, organized by the French Football Federation (FFF) and featuring clubs from all over France and its overseas departments and territories. Due to unrest in New Caledonia, teams from that region were not participating.Paris Saint-Germain, the defending champions, successfully defended their title, beating Reims 3-0 in the final for a record-extending sixteenth Coupe de France title. The tournament was divided into different rounds, with teams entering at various stages depending on their league level.The first round of qualifying took place from September to October, followed by subsequent rounds, including the regional leagues and overseas departments' events. Teams from lower divisions entered later in the competition, with those from Championnat National 3 competing in the third round, Championnat National 2 in the fourth round, and Championnat National in the fifth.The tournament format is as follows:* Round 1: Regional leagues and overseas departments* Rounds 2-6: Further qualifying rounds* Quarter-finals to semi-finals: Scheduled on midweek evenings* Final: Set for May 24thThe competition features teams from various divisions, with some teams entering at different stages due to their league level. The exact number of teams participating in each round is listed in the table below.Note that New Caledonia's withdrawal from the tournament and other regional events are mentioned separately, providing more information on the specific circumstances surrounding these events.The 155th edition of the French club football tournament features a diverse range of teams, including 18 Ligue 2 clubs and representatives from overseas territories such as Mayotte and Tahiti. Unfortunately, due to riots in New Caledonia, no team from that region participated.In the 7th round, AS Dragon, the Tahitian representative, will host a mainland club under a biannual alternation rule, while Diables Noirs from Mayotte must travel to mainland France due to lack of a suitable stadium. A draw was held to determine which teams would travel to Tahiti and French Guiana in the 8th round.The teams participating in each overseas round have been divided into distinct groups based on their geographic location. In Runion, a team from Saint-Denis FC will face AS Samaritaine, while AS Dragon will host US Avranches MSM (4). A total of 173 teams are competing in the tournament, and they have been divided into nine equal-sized groups to minimize travel distances.
