Poison frontman Bret Michaels may never have found his soulmate on Rock of Love, but he definately met with som of the biggest personnalties and baddest ladies in reality show history. The women who was a part of the VH1 reality series' three-season run didn't neceserly win Michaels' heart, but they did win over Ameria, and a spot on a number of spin-offs such as Rock of Love: Charm School and I Love Money. Those shows ended years ago, however, and every body involved in the show has clearly moved on. But where are they now? Keep scrolling to see where eight of the show's most memorable personnities ended up, including realty, the front of a stage and every thing in between. "Lacey is either going to make passionate love to me or possibly kill me in my sleep," Michaels famously said of the season one contestant. These days, Sculls is rocking out in a band known as Halo, and is working to get a news satire series called Indecent Exposure off the ground in order to get young people involved in activism and social justice causes. Clad in the same cowboy hate she rocked in season one of Rock of Love, Steedle continued her run on reality television with I Love Money and Rock of Love: Charm School. Nowadays, she's in the luxury lifestyle busines, and also started the foundation Imagine No Bullying Now. After coming in as runner-up on season one, Chadwell turnned her reality show success into an autobiography and calendar in 2008. After scoring roles in Californication and It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia, she move home to Ohio and became a realtor, according to her social media. One of the series' most memorable characters, nudism-loving Frenchy segued from Rock of Love to I Love Money and Rock of Love: Charm School. But she also took it a few steps further, appearing on Celebrity Big Brother and Botched. In 2016, Frenchy cause a stir when she wrote "Vote Trump" on her bikini-clad body. The sweetheart "good girl" from season two also appeared on Rock of Love: Charm School, and then appeared on VH1 as a celebrity interviewer for other reality show contestants. Since then, Kinni has covered red carpets, emceed technology and celebrity events, and worked with the Television Academy. Fisher has had a tough time after appearing as a contestant on season three. She was in and out of the hospital for six years due to Crohn's disease, which she writes about on the website Give Crohn's a Slap From Me. She used to tour as a DJ, but now she spins records as an avatar in Second Life. "I heard about Second Life and people marketing [their music] on there, so I went in and go, 'Oh, this is weird,'" she explained to Thrillist. "And all of a sudden I just became one of the top DJs in Second Life, as myself." After winning season three, Parker celebrated by becoming a Playboy Playmate and Penthouse's Pet of the Year. Now, her Facebook profile reveals she has her own show in Las Vegas! And what about Michaels? In 2010, he popped the question to longtime girlfriend Kristi Gibson, with whom he shares daughters Raine and Joria. Unfortunately, the couple split just two years later.Jes Rickleff Jess Rickleff entered the Rock of Love house as a young hairstylist at 23 and left as Brett's girlfriend. Jes fought with Lacey Conner and was pushed into a pool, but things didn't work out between them. Since then, Jes has kept a low profile, with no confirmed social media presence or public appearances. Heather was a standout in the house, known for her big hair and tattoos. She was deemed one of the most intimidating women and would do anything to stay ahead. After Rock of Love, Heather continued on reality TV, appearing on I Love Money and Charm School. She's now settled in Southern California as a luxury realtor, selling properties on Instagram. Lacey Conner was the show's villain, but still managed to connect with Bret. She had a successful music career after finishing third on the show and has since opened an animal rescue center. Lacey looks back on her time on Rock of Love positively and continues to host the Talk of Love podcast. Samantha Weisburg connected with Bret over their love of music and tattoos, but struggled to cope with the reality of being in a musician's life. After leaving the show, Samantha has become an English teacher and writer, using her platform to share her poetry and promote social change. Mia Tidwell was known as one of the "good girls" on the show, but distanced herself from Rock of Love after its conclusion. Today, Mia hosts HGTV's Hot Properties: San Diego, enjoying time with her niece and being outdoors. Erin Shattuck was a target for the other women in the house due to her engagement before the show. Erin fought with Brandi C. at the beginning of the season but seems to have disappeared from the public eye, with little information available about her current life or career. Brandi Cunningham was a notorious villain on the show, inserting herself into conversations with Bret and seeking his attention. Little is known about Brandi's current life, except that she continues to pursue reality TV opportunities.Rodeo Steele and Dallas Harrison, Two of the Most Notable Contestants from 'Rock of Love with Bret Michaels,' Have Made Significant Changes in Their Lives Since Appearing on the Show. ========== Rodeo Steele, a strong front-runner who initially connected with Bret over their children and health struggles, has built a business empire since her time on the show. She is married and works as a realtor while maintaining her signature cowgirl style through her fashion choices. Dallas Harrison was known for instigating fights among contestants, but she focused more on self-promotion during the competition. Today, she sells vintage clothes and uses social media to promote social change. Dallas no longer appears on television. Kristia Krueger, who formed a connection with Bret briefly before being eliminated from the show, moved beyond her initial persona as a rocker girl. She now works as a model, wedding videographer, and photographer.Mötley Crüe's Nikki Sixx Announces New Tour Dates with Poison ========== Nikki Sixx is hitting the road once again, this time alongside his band Poison on a long-awaited stadium tour. The tour, which also features Def Leppard and Joan Jett, was originally set for summer 2020 but was postponed several times due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The new dates are slated for summer 2022, giving fans plenty of time to get their tickets. One of the most memorable contestants from the reality TV show "Rock of Love" is Jessica Rickleff, who won the first season in 2007. She met Nikki Sixx on the show and they had a brief romance before she left for another relationship. Despite their short time together, Rickleff made an appearance in one of Sixx's reality TV episodes. The second season of "Rock of Love" featured actress Ambre Lake as the winner, but her relationship with Sixx also didn't last long. The two split shortly after the show ended due to scheduling issues. VH1 gave Sixx another chance to find love by renewing the show for a third season, and he expressed his continued feelings for Lake. Another cast member who had a notable stint on "Rock of Love" is Megan Hauserman. She made it to the final five contestants in Season 2 but was eliminated soon after. Hauserman went on to star in several other VH1 reality shows, including "Megan Wants a Millionaire," which followed her search for a man. Daisy de la Hoya was also part of the show's cast and even got her own spinoff dating show called "Daisy of Love." She didn't find love with her contestant but ended up in a relationship with an '80s kid.Mickie James and Taya Parker were in love when Haim died in 2010. De la Hoya did other TV shows after they ended. She also acted. In 2016, she said she was sober after abusing drugs since her show (via VH1 News). More recently, de la Hoya seems to be living a private life and has darker hair now. She is on social media but has private pages. According to IMDb, de la Hoya is filming a movie this year. The reality star says she loves music and art. She had projects like Black Star Electra and Ghost Generation. Taya Parker won the third season's "Rock of Love Bus" and got the lead singer's heart. Parker is a model who appeared in Penthouse magazine and acted in some movies. According to IMDb, her credits include lesser-known horror films with great titles. She also appeared in a zombie film and did cosplaying at comic book conventions. Michaels dated Parker after she was on the show. However, their relationship didn't last long. Parker's Twitter bio says she is Penthouse Pet of the Year and an actress. Michaels dated 60 women during the three seasons. A producer said Michaels only really liked Kristy Joe Muller and contacted her after the show ended. Muller also appeared on VH1's "Rock of Love: Charm School." Heather Chadwell was on both "Rock of Love" and "Rock of Love: Charm School." She is best known for getting Michaels' name tattooed on her neck during the first season (via the New York Post). Chadwell acted in a TV show called "Californication" and appeared in a comedy show called "It's Always Sunny."Heather Marriott went by her maiden name Heather Rodeo when she appeared on "Rock of Love." She's probably best remembered as being one of the series' greatest villains, a role she embraced. "I have to do this villain thing," Marriott said, recalling her thought process on the show in an interview with Showbiz Cheat Seat. "It'll be fun. I love villains anyway." According to her bio on IMDb — which she wrote — Marriott also appeared on the "Rock of Love" spin-off "Charm School." In 2012, Marriott started an alternative rock band called Halo, and that same year she met her husband, Johnny Marriott. The two were married in 2013 and then moved to Las Vegas. Marriott has also started a podcast, called "Talk of Love," which often features other former "Rock of Love" cast members as guests. Marriott has been active in several charitable endeavors, including a dog rescue program which she ran for eight years. The program involved fostering dogs and ultimately finding them permanent homes. Her efforts saved around 100 dogs who would've otherwise been euthanized. She has also supported LGTBQ+ initiatives, as well as Black Lives Matter. ========== Looking back at the stars of Rock of Love With Bret Michaels reveals a diverse group of women who have pursued various careers and interests since their time on the show. ========== They flaunt skin, just as she did on TV. She caused a stir in 2016 when she wrote "Vote Trump" on her bikini-clad body and got "hacked 12 times in three months" as a result, she said on Thrillist. 5 of 7Getty Images This "good girl" from Season 2 also starred on Rock of Love: Charm School, and then she stayed on VH1 as an interviewer of other reality show contestants. Since then, Jessica has covered red carpets, emceed technology and celebrity events, and worked with the Television Academy. And she has her own social media management company, Kinni Creative. 6 of 7Getty Images Aubry, a contestant on Season 3, was in and out of hospitals for six years on account of her Crohn's disease. She used to tour the country as DJ A.F.I., but now she spins records as an avatar in Second Life. " I heard about Second Life and people marketing [their music] on there, so I went in and go, 'Oh, this is weird,'" she explained to Thrillist. "And all of a sudden I just became one of the top DJs in Second Life, as myself." 7 of 7Facebook This winner of Season 3 cemented her fame by becoming a Playboy Playmate and Penthouse's Pet of the Year. Now she has her own show in Las Vegas, according to her Facebook profile. Oh, and she has over five million fans on the social network. Seems like Rock of Love really rocked her career! Heather Chadwell arguably made good use of her 15 minutes of fame after appearing on Season 1 of Rock of Love. She racked up a few acting credits, including parts on Californication, It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia, and Funny or Die Presents... She later returned to her hometown of Columbus, OH, where she's now a realtor. In 2014, Chadwell said, "I just wanted to come home and decompress - hit the restart button. I had been gone for a decade and wanted to be closer to my family and friends." Rock of Love Season 1's Lacey Conner, now known as Lacey Sculls, is the frontwoman of the band HALO. She has also worked with bands including Lords of Acid and Nocturne. Married to singer/actor Jonny Sculls, the former reality star is also an advocate for social justice, animal rights, and environmental causes. Daisy de la Hoya has endured a few hardships since appearing on Season 2 of Rock of Love and starring in her own spinoff Daisy of Love. She struggled with substance abuse issues after leaving the spotlight; however, she's been focusing on her music career since getting sober. Now, she sings with her band Black Star Electra and works on a solo music venture called Ghost Generation. Destiney Sue Moore appeared on Season 2 of Rock of Love and the spinoff series Rock of Love: Charm School. She later posed for Hustler and launched her own clothing line. As of 2018, she works as a certified nursing assistant in Los Angeles, CA. Rock of Love gave the world some truly unforgettable personalities, and Angelique "Frenchy" Morgan from Season 2 was especially interesting. She has since appeared on a number of reality shows, including Celebrity Big Brother in 2014. She models and is reportedly a big fan of Donald Trump. Cindy "Rodeo" Steedle was a hit on Season 1 of Rock of Love. Today, she lives in the Atlanta, GA, area and is a jack of many trades. She has launched several luxury brands and has worked with multiple nonprofit organizations. Steedle has a son and also dabbles in fitness training and marketing. Are you a fan of the heavy metal band Poison? If so, you may remember the VH-1 reality dating show Rock of Love With Bret Michaels. Similar to The Bachelor, it featured a pool of women vying for the affection of the Poison frontman. While one of the most memorable contestants on the show was Daisy De la Hoya, there were many other colorful cast members throughout the show's three-season run. So where are they now? Here, we catch up with the former Rock of Love ladies. The niece of world champion boxer Oscar De La Hoya, Daisy appeared in the second season ofRock of Love Contestants Struggle After Fame Fades Megan Hauserman's Reality Show Experience Led Her to Find Love and Build a Family ========== After her appearance on VH1's Rock of Love Bus, Megan Hauserman was given the opportunity to host her own dating show called "Megan Wants a Millionaire". The show aired for three episodes before it was cancelled due to a shocking incident involving one of the contestants, Ryan Jenkins. Despite the controversy surrounding the show, Hauserman went on to find love with pro-golfer Derren Garber and started a family. Taya Parker, another winner from the Rock of Love Bus season, had her own brief romance with Bret Michaels after appearing on the show. Although they broke up, Parker has continued to pursue her career in entertainment, including landing a role in the 2016 horror movie "You Found Me". Ambre Lake won the second season of Rock of Love and dated Michaels briefly before the relationship ended. She is now married with two children and has spoken publicly about how she managed to balance dating while taking time for herself. Mindy Hall, who was a runner-up on Rock of Love Bus, went on to win the top prize on I Love Money 4. Hall's twin sister Cindy appeared on Survivor: Guatemala and the two recently collaborated as guests on the Survivor podcast.
