Heilung tour north america 2025

Heilung Announces Final Show in August Scandinavian folk outfit Heilung has confirmed their last show will take place this August, following their Amplified History tour in 2025. The band plans to play a one-off performance on August 17 at an undisclosed location, and promise to return in the future. Heilung's farewell tour dates are as follows: Helsinki Ice Hall, Finland (3/7) Stockholm Hovet, Sweden (3/9) Oslo Spektrum, Norway (3/12) Aarhus ACC, Denmark (3/14) Copenhagen Black Box, Denmark (3/16) Oberhausen Turbinehalle, Germany (3/19) Zurich Hallenstadion, Switzerland (3/21) Esch-sur-Alzette Rockhal, Luxembourg (3/23) London O2 Brixton Academy, UK (4/15) Dublin 3Arena, Ireland (4/17) Edinburgh O2 Academy, UK (4/19) Manchester O2 Apollo, UK (4/21) Lille Zenith, France (4/23) Lyons Halle Tony Garnier, France (4/25) Milan Teatro Arcimboldi, Italy (4/27) The band has stated that they will "vanish from the stages" but promise to return stronger than ever before. Their music often draws on traditional shamanism, and the band believes in taking time to recharge and reconnect with their power and spirits. Heilung's Concert Experience: A Reciprocal Connection Under the Stars The German experimental group Heilung delivered an exceptional performance, with excellent performers but a subpar venue that hindered the overall experience. Heilung's concerts are known for their unique connection between performers and audience, creating a visceral and visible exchange. In contrast, the Keller Auditorium in Portland, OR, felt like oil and water, where the audience sat politely and watched shows while waiting to react. Despite some initial movement from the crowd, the bolted-down seats and timing of the show meant that expressiveness was stifled. However, Heilung is a group that thrives under natural conditions, as seen in their outdoor concerts with amazing acoustics. Heilung, the experimental-folk act, has announced their hiatus starting from 2025. Before that, they will complete their final European tour, with their last show scheduled for next August. In a statement on Instagram, the band wrote in their signature style: “Anda fardhaThe end of a journey “Life is a journey and all journeys end at one point. After several years of extensive touring, Heilung has decided to retreat for a while. s”Heilung’s work has strong notations of traditional shamanism. Shamans retreat, sometimes very long, to be reunited with their power, their spirits; to recharge. If they would constantly work, they would burn out, lose contact to themselves, their helping entities and their light. “Heilung retreats now. It will vanish from the stages, the roaring drums will be silent and the ecstatic dance is over. It will go to sleep, rest for a time and return stronger than ever before. “Our last ritual will be the 17th of August on a for now secret location. “Tickets for this tour go on sale Thursday 07.11 at 10:00 CET. The band's unique blend of pagan-folk performance and "amplified history" will be showcased in several cities across the continent, including San Francisco, Portland, Denver, Chicago, Washington DC, New York, and Montreal. Formed by German vocalist Kai Uwe Faust and Danish instrumentalist Christopher Juul in 2014, Heilung draws inspiration from pre-Christian traditions and mythology. The group's music has gained significant attention worldwide, with their most recent album "Futha" featuring the hit song "Norupo." Released in 2019, the album debuted at #3 on the Billboard Heatseeker charts and #4 on the Billboard World Music Charts. Heilung's live performances are known for their energy and mystique, and the North American tour promises to be an unforgettable experience. Fans can look forward to a ritual-like atmosphere as the band embarks on this new chapter in their career.
