The league phase will consist of eight matchdays between August and December 2025, followed by the knockout phase. The draw for the first qualifying round has been announced, with 28 teams participating and seeded based on their UEFA club coefficients.The 2025-26 UEFA Champions League qualification process has been outlined, with several rounds to determine the participants in the league phase. The first round involves ties between winners and runners-up from various leagues across Europe.The qualification process begins with a round of qualifying matches, where teams will compete against each other in two-legged ties. The winners of these ties will advance to the next round. A total of 20 teams will participate in the third qualifying round, which is scheduled for July 21, 2025.The teams participating in the play-off round will be determined based on their UEFA club coefficients. This draw will take place on August 4, 2025. The teams will be divided into four pots, with nine teams each. The first team drawn in each tie will be the home team for the first leg.Several top European leagues have already determined their participants in the qualification process. For example, Rangers and Celtic are participating in the League path, while Liverpool is set to face Slavia Prague in the Champions path.The qualified teams will compete in the league phase draw on August 28, 2025, at the Grimaldi Forum in Monaco. The final lineup of teams has not been determined yet but will be based on their UEFA club coefficients and previous performances.The UEFA Champions League draw process is based on the teams' coefficients, with the exception of the title holders who are automatically placed in pot one. The 36 participating teams will be manually selected and then paired with opponents from other pots through a random automated system. Each team faces two opponents from each of the four pots, one at home and one away, ensuring that no team plays against an association-mate or more than two sides from the same league. As of May 12, 2025, teams such as Liverpool, Atltico Madrid, Barcelona, and Bayern Munich have qualified for the Champions League phase. The competition will also feature other top-tier European clubs, including Inter Milan, Paris Saint-Germain, and Ajax.
